Description

Provide a short description of the event and its activities.

During WP13, the Romanian partners supported the design and implementation of 61 youth-led community intervention projects and advocacy activities in 37 localities across Romania, exceeding the 50 initiatives initially foreseen. The activities aimed to combat historical distortion, racism and intolerance and to promote EU fundamental rights and values by connecting historical memory with issues relevant to young people and their communities.

The implementation followed the approach foreseen in WP13: supporting young people in designing their initiatives, providing mentoring during planning and implementation, organising activities in their communities, and supporting follow-up, dissemination, reflection on lessons learned, and reporting. Youth leadership drew on young people already involved in Blue4EU through previous project activities (WP2, WP4, WP5), including oral history work, exchanges and training activities, as well as additional volunteers mobilised through their schools, universities, youth organisations and local networks. In many cases, young people who had previously collected oral history interviews transformed the stories and historical material into workshops, debates, exhibitions and activities for their peers and communities. This progression is visible throughout the project reports, where young volunteers frequently moved from collecting testimonies to designing and facilitating their own local interventions.

The 61 initiatives used a wide variety of participatory formats, including workshops and debates, oral history and storytelling activities, exhibitions, documentary screenings and production, intergenerational dialogues, experiential learning activities, school and university events and community discussions. Topics included everyday life and education under communism, propaganda and censorship, workers' and women's rights, the Romanian Revolution, migration, discrimination, democracy and fundamental rights. Personal stories, historical objects and oral testimonies were frequently used to connect broader historical processes with participants' family, school and community experiences. The reports repeatedly highlight the value of interactive and hands-on activities, personal testimonies and intergenerational dialogue.

An important lesson from WP13 was that youth leadership requires adequate mentoring. Young people brought ideas, stories, motivation, and access to their peer networks, but often needed support to turn an idea into a feasible activity, organise the intervention, mobilise participants and stakeholders, and facilitate implementation. All three Romanian partners contributed to this mentoring process, with particularly direct involvement from Gutenberg and C.School, while UBB contributed through its academic and educational networks, especially built through WP4 & WP5. Teachers involved in earlier Blue4EU activities, together with other educational stakeholders, also became important local supporters and multipliers, helping young teams access schools and communities, mobilise participants and provide historical and educational guidance. The reports confirm the importance of such support, while maintaining young people's ownership of the activities.

According to the final database, WP13 recorded 635 young people in youth leadership roles, 1,252 additional young participants and 549 other stakeholders. Each intervention was documented through a campaign/project report, including lessons learned that informed the Blue4EU Sustainability, Replication and Scaling-up Plan. Dissemination was carried out through Blue4EU channels and through schools, youth organisations and other local stakeholders. In total, 97 social media posts, reels and stories documented and promoted the Romanian initiatives.

Data protection note: The deliverable includes only the summary sheet of the WP database. The full database and event photographs depicting identifiable minors are not included, as they contain personal data relating to young participants, including participants aged 13–18.
